Based on the feedback provided, I removed the holding shape of this route and simplified the design by using the navy colour palette only.

The 'i' still suggests the idea of forward motion, something which iMining would be doing in the industry with the integration of technology.

WINNING

2A

This is the same layout and idea as logo 3 from the first presentation but I changed the 'i' completely.

I took inspiration from the silhouette shape of the mine headgear to create a very abstract and contemporary (but still legible) 'i' then continued the design using horizontal lines to balance against the "i's" and "n's".

The navy and yellow palette contrast well with one another.

The logo consists of the word "WINNING" in a bold, navy blue, sans-serif typeface. The letter 'i' is replaced by a stylized graphic: a small orange square sits above a larger orange triangle that points downwards, with its base aligned with the top of the 'W'. Three parallel, light blue horizontal lines extend from the right side of the 'i' graphic, passing through the vertical strokes of the 'M', 'N', and 'N' in the word. The 'G' at the end of the word is a standard, clean letterform.

The logo for i-MINING. It features a stylized lowercase 'i' in orange, followed by the word 'MINING' in a bold, dark blue, sans-serif font. The 'i' is positioned to the left of the 'M', and the 'N' and 'I' have a light blue diagonal line through them.

This is a new option,

I combined a mining helmet with cogs to represent both mining and development to form the "i".

A simple but striking logo.

This route is a bit of a wildcard in the sense that it may be perceived as perhaps being too abstract but I wanted to give it to you as an option.

I wanted to simplify the headgear route even further and so kept it to the simplest possible shapes with no details whatsoever.

The triangle represents the base of the headgear and the circle would be the wheel.

The alternative route integrating the headgear would be this one.

I have designed the headgear in more detail but still kept it as simple as possible to avoid losing any detail the smaller the logo is viewed, i.e. on the website.
